

Key Attributes of the Doctoral Program at UWM's Lubar School of Business

The University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee's Sheldon B. Lubar School of Business welcomes applications from qualified students who are interested in earning a doctoral degree in business and becoming faculty members at business schools in U.S. and international universities. Some important attributes of our program are:

- Our PhD Program is STEM designated and was one of the first U.S. business school doctoral programs to have the STEM designation.
- The Sheldon B. Lubar School of Business is a part of the University of Wisconsin – Milwaukee (UWM) and its focus is aligned with the overall research stature of UWM. UWM is one of the nation's leading research universities as recognized by the Carnegie Classification of Institutions of Higher Education with R1 status, reflecting a “doctoral university with the Highest Research Activity.”
- Financial support is readily available. Almost all full-time PhD students currently receive financial support as Teaching Assistants or Project Assistants.
- The program is led by an excellent team of faculty members. Our faculty members have earned their doctoral degrees at leading institutions.
- Our university is conveniently located and is only about 90 minutes away from Chicago.
- Our doctoral graduates have been placed in high-quality schools, including Purdue University, University of Notre Dame, University of Central Florida, University of Texas-Arlington, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, University of Texas at El Paso, Arizona State University, and Syracuse University.
- Doctoral students may major in (1) Management Information Systems, (2) Finance, (3) Marketing, (4) Supply Chain & Operations Management, or (5) Organizational Behavior & Strategic Management.
- Our PhD students come to us from a variety of educational backgrounds. This includes individuals from backgrounds in fields as varied as Business, Engineering, Statistics, Software, the Sciences, Psychology, Economics, and Liberal Arts. Although most of our students come in with a Masters degree, we do encourage strongly qualified applicants with an undergraduate degree.
